About the Founder

Jessica Downes is a New York-based creator, history major, and mom of three who’s always believed that people — and their stories — are worth listening to. With a Master’s in Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages, she’s spent her life helping others connect through conversation. A lifelong fan of current events and curious dates, Jessica built Talk More Tonight to make small talk feel smarter, easier, and a little more magical. When she's not designing new features or chasing headlines, she's chasing her three boys — and waiting for Hollywood to discover her rom-com screenplay.

Talk More Tonight for Kids

What is Talk More Tonight for Kids?

Talk More Tonight for Kids was created with one big goal in mind:
More conversations. Less mindless screen time.

Yes, it's an app — but not the kind that glues kids to a tablet. This one sparks real-world curiosity, family connection, and fun ideas that pull you off the screen and into the moment.

Whether your kid is into dinosaurs, dance parties, or asking a million questions during dinner, this app helps families connect with thoughtful prompts, playful news, and simple activities to do together.

Because the best conversations don't always happen at bedtime — but they do happen when we slow down, look up, and talk more tonight.

From silly sparks to serious subjects, Talk More Tonight for Kids helps the next generation grow up informed, imaginative, and confident sharing their voice.
